"The care given by the staff at Uvedale Hall to my great aunt was second to none. They were kind, thoughtful and caring. They made everything so much easier for us all in the last few months. We will always be grateful to them all."

"Staff are always approachable and professional. My mother needs support and encouragement, particularly with her eating. Staff actively monitoring the quantity of food she eats and the chef talks to her frequently about her requirements. They offer alternatives if she dislikes prepared meals. Family frequently visit and whatever the time of day are updated on her progress. There are a wide range of activities which are offered throughout the week.

I am so pleased we found her a place in 'Uvedale Hall' as the care is so good and consistent."

Explore The Local Area...

Named after the famous botanist, Robert Uvedale, Uvedale Hall lies in the Gipping Valley in the pretty Suffolk town of Needham Market.

Close to Stowmarket and Ipswich, the home also has Needham Lake nearby, a lovely walk for the more energetic resident. Whilst Robert Uvedale was renowned for propagating the Cedar of Lebanon tree, it is the hundred year old geranium plant in the resident's conservatory that attracts everyone today.
